which the Republicans of the Senate, after their two caucuses, have decided to stand. They do not propose to yield, as Mr. Garfield did, but they propose to smoke the Demecratic intentions out and develop what the Democrats construe the sixth section to mean. The words have been quoted several times in these dispatches and are understood. When the section is reached the Republicans will insist upon the Democratic leaders stating explicitly just what their construction of the section is. If it means that the President shall not be allowed to station patrols of soldiers to do police duty at the polls, the Republicans will unanimously vote for it, with that understanding, and the interpretation distinctly expressed, and an amendment will be offered to make the section more explicit. If it means that the President shall not be allowed to enforce the laws of the United States, if necessary, by the aid of the military on election days; if it means that he cannot bring troops to drive away Ku-Klux and rifle clubs from the polls, prevent intimidation and murder, and pro- dustry and steadiness as affecting tect citizens of the United States in the free exercise of their constitu-
